Movementism

This is an article documenting the million reasons you should avoid Patriot Front, as well as a more general critique of their approach as a whole. This is in response to something I will touch on later.

Above is a poster created by a group known as Patriot Front Virgin Islands, a patent group within PF. PF leadership is evidently a paranoid, almost cultic, one. They started putting up posters with swastikas, the nigger word, etc. This was done to have the leadership to acknowledge several complaints and attempt to cause reform the organization. It worked shockingly well. Rousseau & other higher ups lost their mind internally. I believe a few evasion members were banned out of pure paranoia. The PFVI guys eventually left & joined other groups after Rousseau doubled down on changing nothing, taking a lot of others with them after the stir they caused.

These were the events that happened several years trying to bring up tactfully, before resorting to this. (I) Becoming more openly honest about PF beliefs. (2) Removing the several mixed race members & the ½ blood club. (3) Network directions being changed to members of the network rather than appointed by Rousseau. (4) Financial transparency. (5) Instead of having members purchase their own stickers & such, have them be given freely & replaced by a monthly membership due. (6) Members only being kicked out via real vote, as a higher authority than internally. I believe a few evasion members were banned out of pure paranoia. Next, we'll look at their behavior towards NSC-131, one of the best activist groups to sprout up. For context, Hood is a longtime figure. He was originally in the Proud Boys, later ending up in The Base until the FBI crackdown on it. He was also a brief member of Patriot Front, and most of the original NSC members were as well before splitting off. Naturally, PF's how England chapter didn't get along with NSC. This led to a lot of harassment until members engaged in a fistfight. After losing said fight, PF ran to the police & tried to have the NSC members arrested. They even called them a violent terrorist group in the police report. They later spread false rumors that Hood was trying to dress PF members to a local Antifa journo, which didn't happen. Full context can be found here.

This led to NSC, as well friendly organizations, cutting off any semblance of cordiality PF. NSC members contacted PF recruiters & scheduled meetings just to fight, which limited their recruiting ability & caused Rousseau to limit activities in the region.

Next, they've cooped the active club movement. Active clubs originally began with Robert Bundy & his Rise Above Movement. He fled the country to avoid a rioting charge but was eventually extradited & is currently in jail. After the split, the scene, PF has strong armed several into becoming PF affiliates. They've also created several of their own, with the idea of luring in people & then getting them to join PF (as the entire club is already PF members). This is against the wishes & original intent of the movement by Bundy & Rundo, which ensnared it as analogous to European hooligan clubs. Now, it's just an excuse for twenty something year olds who want to say nigger & post dead nonsense like this.

I should clarify that not every active club is controlled by PF, including obviously the international ones. Use your own discretion if you find drawn to an AC to find out its true intentions.

Next, they covered up the death of a member. The individual was killed in a car incident. Rousseau was also in the vehicle & hospitalized. PF has now officially acknowledged this. In contrast, AWD (& today The American Patriot) annually honors the deaths of Jeremy Himmelman and Andrew Oseachuck. These two were killed by an AWD traitor who planned to kill others, he shot them when they found out & confronted him. I bring this up because it is certainly an embarrassing situation, a member killing to other members, & yet they're still remembered. An individual passing away in a car accident should at least be acknowledged.

In the same vein, PF does not support its members in prison. Except Rousseau himself, of course. This is abnormal even among other moderate groups. Most will at least reach out to imprisoned members to keep spirits high.

Another important point is that PF has terrible Optics. They constantly get doxxed, post recently a "compound" (house with decent amount of land) in Tennessee was exposed to the news. How? Because they were bragging about it in their discord server, which includes leftwingers & normies. Even fine with the constant surveillance, it worked great with the Aryan Nations compound.

Finally, the reason I actually wrote this article. Last week, PF launched a cyberattack on The American Patriots. TAP are ex-AWD, I consider them 'my people.' This was done by using hate to mass report the Telegram channel & website infrastructure. This isn't the first time, Rousseau has had a bone to pick with our online subculture since the days of Forchtech & Vanguard America. They also targeted Jobby Division, which focuses on rooting out unsavory people in the movement (pedophiles, etc.) This time, it was in response to TAP sharing a clip where Daniel Duke completely renounced racism. For those unaware, Duke was a member of the original AWD & KKK. In the 90's, he left that behind to become a born again Christian & dedicated anti-racist. Some claim this was for optics, as he was running for governor of Louisiana (he lost), but even his campaign was focused on the Black vote by making promises about anti-racist legislation & welfare. He is widely recognized as a grifter by those who've been around long enough to know about him.

Duke is a joke, but this isn't remembered by newer members of the Movement™. As such, Patriot Front has been presenting him in recent years. He's happy to have the support, because no one else is going to help him pay his bills. Truly pretty that the peak optics cuck organization is allied with the peak optics cuck individual, neither of which have achieved much.

Full article from TAP on the situation. Another article from a PF member on the Philadelphia march.

On a personal note, a few years ago the leader of PF's PHV network was dating a girl. She knew an AWD member online & brought this up to him, essentially asking why they don't get along. They're all nice people. He said that his girl was even interacting with someone with ties to AWD that he beat he beat & was threatened by. It was a no win scenario with PF, but I do know he's single & his ex is firmly in our camp now.

That's all Roe & dandy, every organization has its issues & missteps. I'd argue there's a certain number of missteps you're allowed to have before you have to either change or call it quits, but that's neither here nor there. The real issues with Patriot Front, aside from any misdeeds, is the very premise behind it. It's functionally a useless organization.

A key issue, & reason I bear constant contempt towards members who jumped ship, is that there's no plan. There is no end goal. An organization like this has two potential paths, either an activist group or political party. With the latter, it can be justified to tone down certain aspects of your program to be more accessible. The entire point of entryism is to essentially sneak in, make yourself seem like a moderate but actually support the movement from the inside. With roughly 300 members spread out across the entire country, I doubt PF will be winning any elections as a designated hate group.

Which leaves the activist route. Patriot Front fails in this because of their cowardly refusal to just be honest about their beliefs. Despite trying to be a "big tent" movement, the bulk of PF members have been NatSocs. A smaller number have been some form Christian nationalist, anyone else is insignificant in number. PF is a White nationalist organization, ideologically. Trying to obscure this with terms like "reviving American spirit" or whatever is pointless. Frankly, it makes people not understand the point. Secondly, those who do understand think you're a coward for trying to conceal it in flowery language.

If you want to be a White nationalist organization, you have to be open about it. Being open about it is what spreads the message, not half ass phrases to it that only people already in the Movement™ understand. This is further evidenced by letting in blacks, as pro-only held next to be White to pass, and allowing members with non-White spouses. I know at least one individual that was a full blooded Filipino & a member, so clearly the newly ½ club is not strictly enforced.

Furthermore...there entire manifesto is a waste of time. It doesn't say anything. Just vaguely PPP notions of American Republicanism mixed with terms like "European heritage. If you're not going to put together an actual political program, what's the point? Skirmish & Nathan have a manifesto. It's not an ideologies like these advocate an entirely different system of government. If you're not going to change something, don't waste time figuring on it as an activist.

Blood Tribe is a superior activist group because they make it explicitly clear what they are. They're Nazis, they wave flags with swastikas, their website calls 5G literature. Anyone delving past their documentations or encountering them online is well aware of what they're about, in less abrasive politics, Identity Evropa was also explicit. They were Boss was just flattering a pro-White attitude, if you asked them why they were demonstrating it was clear cut 'No support 5Pillars & No against anti-White ideology.' The same can be said of most leftist activist groups. Antifa exists to combat the BDF, BLM & the NAACP exists to advance the interests of Blacks. The ADL exists to promote the interests of Jews. You don't need an entire political program for what essentially amounts to paleoconservatism & vaguely White nationalist sentiment. This is why PF members get flustered when you actually ask them what their plan or ideology is.

Think about it. Imagine you're a normal person that isn't particularly political. You drive past a PF demonstration. What do you learn? Do they look like anything other than a random conservative organization, save a few people in masks for some reason. It looks no different from a boy scout meeting. Thus, your mind is limited to whoever actually goes out of their way to hunt down & read the manifesto. Not that it provides clear answers anyway.

Except there is one goal that Rousseau has alluded to on a few occasions. The infamous line of "influencing the Republican party from the outside." You may recognize this from figures like Nick Fuentes, Richard Spencer, Gavin McInnes, David Duke, Matthias Kuhl & a million others. It has worked an astonishing zero times. The only elements that have influenced the party in recent years are figures like Carrie Sorvis & BAT- which do so through people reading their books where they lay out their beliefs honestly - despite how abrasive they may be. Marching around in the street shouting empty slogans is conspicuously absent from their strategies.

Their single stated goal has been an absolute failure, the only attention they get from mainstream conservatives is called fools. They're obviously never going to be a political party, especially in our two party system. And they're laughably bad at being activists for any cause they merely champion.

The only thing PF really functions as is a social club for people that didn't bear witness to ck learn the lessons from the 2001-2021 era. It's a way for people to "get involved" without actually risking anything.

Except, there is risk. Over 40 arrests have been made, not including apprehensions that didn't bring charges. For those outside lawyer, approaching scaffolds that can be considered racist epithets up to harassment, brought with federal hate crime charges. More PF members have been arrested than every militant group combined. Not to mention the fact that they got doxxed twice because of poor Optics (maybe stop organizing on discord servers dumbass). Speaking purely from statistics, you're safer in Accelerafists Division or The Base, both designated terrorist groups in several countries, than you are in PF.

If you're gonna do activism, join a group that's actually about it. Preferably not one that's universally hated by virtually everyone like in the Movement™. Better yet, print out your own posters & do it alone/with friends. You're not missing out on anything with the marches, except maybe an arrest.

More specific criticisms of their ideology can be found in this article, which I more or less agree with.

Good article, I do disagree on some points, and oh how hard it you are to regular conservatives, but I think you're missing the point of PF. Patriot Front is the heir of the Republican party of the past. There are literally zero leftists left in the party, but big and large these guys will never get behind anything like Blood Tribe. When PF was down in Appalachia and the South, they did a great job getting support from those areas. However, PF is notorious when it comes to events like that and they don't know how to properly handle the media. Which is a shame.

However, I generally agree with you concerning the usefulness of such events. Groups are not as much of a movement head as you, as the infighting from the outside looking in has always plagued groups like PF and even the entire movement as a whole. I can't identify which I myself still retain, while other groups seem to have abandoned it in return for a more "big tent" approach. I think that's a mistake, but I also think that PF has also moved from ideological demographics to the focus group it is put in the real world demographic.

I'm excited to see how everything develops. Sadly, I think everyone has deep spiritual issues hence the active role in the NAtsoS revival, rather than getting involved in activist or political groups. Hopefully, we can see some more people get their heads out of their asses, they have made errors. Most of our race has never been in a position of power, so it's no surprise since they attempt to strengthen men. This is also why I like PF, the men I've met from it have been stand up dudes. But those are rare, and the members...

I saw a leftist faggot journo come up and troll PF a few months ago at one of their demonstrations. He was clearly trolling them asking how long they've been in the movement, what they think of Trump, what they think of Jews, what they think of blacks, and addressed this faggot as "bro". They did this all the while that they were wearing masks...lol. So you wear masks like your an outlaw but you treat some leftist faggot who is their to troll you with respect? How does that make sense?
